

After getting off the bus,
walk back for about 50 m until you are
on the intersection.

Watch for the sign “Sagamihara City Museum”
on the intersection.
Make a right and go straight.

A photograph of a street intersection in Japan. On the left, a traffic light pole has a sign that reads "共和小前" (Kyowasho) above the lights. A person is pushing a stroller on the sidewalk. In the center, a white delivery truck is stopped at the intersection. On the right, two women are walking across a crosswalk. The background is filled with lush green trees. A yellow text box is overlaid on the lower-left portion of the image.

After a few minutes
of walk, you are on another intersection.
ISAS is just around the corner (on the left).